etween the Government and a any rate. Now, these writers an any rate of the case. They are endeavoring to make a mountain out of a mole-hill. The President has not the slightest idea of demolishing France and bolting her at a moutful, simply because her Minister has made himself obnoxious. These writers talk largely about the "dignity" of the country, but it is at a low obb, I am thinking, if it requires boistering up by such bombast as appeared in an article in the Courier & Euquirer. No, the whole of this matter is a tempest in a tempet, grasped at by letter writers to relieve the tedium of a Washington Summer. There is no apprehension on the part of the President or his Cabinet of a rupture with France. They had a perfect right to demand the France. They had a perfect right to demand the trouble to look into Kent or Story on the Constitution, will see that this, in itself, is a harmless affair. But what may result from the bomb-shells seek across the water by these pugnacious journalists we cannot tell. France may be induced to do some silly thing.

As to that matter of salvage, which seems to have been the origin of this difficulty, there are two sides to the question. Commander Carpender did right in relinquishing his claim to salvage, and the French Minister should have dropped the subject here. It is questionable whether our Gorsality there.

two sides to the question. Commander carpender did right in relinquishing his claim to salvage, and the French Minister should have dropped the subject here. It is questionable whether our Government vessels ought to charge for rescuing drowsing creece and seeing staking resects. It is quite possible that they can legally do so, and if upon this ground our Government vessels are to be thus employed, it is parhaps better that they should enter into some system whereby they may be known as weeckers.

The whole correspondence between the Secretary of State and M. Poussin (five notes on each side) will be printed to morrow, and by it you will see that M. Poussin acted upon instructions from his Government.

SLAVE CASES AT THE WEST.—We learn from Hillsbarough (Ohio) Gestets, that a man by the name of Cognell, from Memphis, undertook to carry off a negro woman, in Clermont county (O) under the following circumstances: His claim to her services as a slave, rested on a paper purporting to be a bill of sale from a former owner in Memphis, not sufficiently suthenticated. This paper certified that he had bought said alave for $350; that she was a slave for life, was sound of body and mind, &c. which transaction took place in April last. This woman was found at the house of Mr. Stone, and sufficiently such that he was a slave for life, was scized by these persons, in the house of Mr. Sloane, and dragged out some distance toward the road, with the intention, as was believed, of transporting her out of the State, as a slave. Before they got to the read, however, they were met by Mr. Sloane, and told they must not remove Mary from his premises without first establishing their claim. cordingly her destination is yet unknown.
